

music | philosophy | photos | videos | thoughts | news | contact |

Force, pre-emptive attack, deception, whatever is necessary

Back on Liberal Imperialism, here is an interesting article written by one of Tony Blair key foreign policy advisors. He has been labelled a 'liberal imperialist'.

Particularly, check out the British establishment's reflected arrogance and nostalgia for colonialism (like they say - old habits die hard). A quick excerpt...

'The postmodern world has to start to get used to double standards... we need to revert to the rougher methods of an earlier era - force, pre-emptive attack, deception, whatever is necessary...'

This, of course, whilst Saddam Hussein is on trial for gassing a village in the midst of war ('whatever is necessary'...)

And UK Defence Secretary, John Reid, is advocating unrestrained violence...

Ends | 4 Apr 2006 | The Leg

post a comment | back to top | thoughts

Essential Viewing:

Why We Fight (A Film By Eugene Jarecki) (48...

Video: Why we Fight - powerful documentary on US foreign policy

Interactive Guide: Europe's arms trade

Related Articles:

European court finds CIA tortured prisoners at Polish black site
Intelligence explains false testimony to Senate oversight panel US engaged in torture after 9/11, review concludes
CIA secret prison: Polish leaders break silence about torture site
Cameron challenged to justify arms sales to Sri Lanka
Sri Lanka continues to torture Tamil prisoners
Sri Lanka's Killing Fields - war crimes in full view of the West
Sri Lanka - West turned blind eye as 30,000 civilians murdered
UN guilty of systematic failure in Sri Lanka
MI6/CIA were told Iraq had no active WMD before invasion
Tutu objects to Tony Blair's double standards on war crimes
Middle East is a graveyard for West's 'ethical' foreign policies
Blair and Miliband covered up our involvement in torture
UK secret policy on suspects tortured overseas revealed
Top Bush aides pushed for Guantanamo torture
US budgeting for war 2001: The State of the World Atlas
We used to convict war criminals for waterboarding
MI5 and MI6 to be sued for first time over torture
Routine use of psychological torture on trial
US embraces the very evils it claims to confront